Maryland lost Northrop Grumman – Are we surprised?

ANNAPOLIS — Northrop Grumman’s recent decision to relocate its headquarters from Maryland to Virginia has quickly turned the spotlight on our state. Why didn’t Maryland make the cut?

Dr. Ron Elfenbein, District 30 Maryland State Senate candidate, says “It is indeed a shame that Northrop Grumman has opted to take its hundreds of high paying jobs and millions of dollars that would have been spent in Maryland to our neighbor Virginia.” Dr. Elfenbein adds, “Unfortunately, the real losers here are the hardworking, unemployed Marylanders who would have realized real job creation had Northrop Grumman chosen Maryland as home.”

Dr. Elfenbein’s desire to lower taxes and provide opportunities for small businesses in Maryland will help strengthen our state’s economy. His efforts to restore transparency and accountability in the Maryland government will begin to place Maryland as the type of state that will top the list for a company like Northrop Grumman.
